

This is why: Raj's story

With CST, we'll improve safety and give patients peace of mind

Raj has a smile that lights up every room she enters. She loves to cook for family and friends, and even helps out at the local community kitchen. Everyone wants to be around Raj. And she wants to be around for them a while longer, despite having been diagnosed with ovarian cancer.

Raj arrives at a BC Cancer Centre for a chemotherapy treatment. She has a drug allergy, which was recorded on her allergy sheet. The sheet would normally be in her patient chart, but her nurse can't find it. The nurse has to look through clinical documentation for the allergy information or connect directly with the provider. This delays the administration of her chemo. With a missing allergy sheet, Raj is also at risk of being given a drug she's allergic to.

With CST, Raj will have peace of mind, knowing her allergy information is in her electronic patient record and instantly accessible to all her care-givers. She'll also get back valuable time, which means more opportunities to brighten the lives of those around her.

Raj is a fictional character but her story is a composite based on true events.

Patient Safety First: Reduce errors and adverse events